

What Policies Does the EU Need in a World Where Electromobility is the New Standard?

25 September 2019, Norway House, Brussels

Description:

The European electromobility market recently has been developing exponentially, with just over 1.2 million electric cars currently on the road. The momentum is not stopping there. The sector will continue to evolve even faster with companies expanding to provide novel services to customers.

In this context, AVERE will host a dedicated afternoon e to welcome the new European Parliament and to discuss with key stakeholders what's needed to guarantee the e-mobility uptake in Europe.

The event will touch on future challenges around the growing sector and what political will and policies are needed to address both the immediate and the long-term issues. Insights from EV Users across Europe will be discussed and used to provide the industry and the new EU policy representatives an understanding of today's key concerns.

Join high-level experts from across the diverse e-mobility world and representatives from the renewed European institutions to discuss the latest business models and market trends shaping the electromobility sector.
